The University-wide and programme-specific courses are compulsory for all PhD students, unless exemption is granted by the Senate GSC under exceptional circumstances. These courses should normally be completed before the Qualifying Examinations. Students who fail a course on the first attempt should re-take the course or an alternate course as determined by the Faculty GSCs or the GRS. A student who is unable to pass a retaken course (or the designated alternate course) on a second attempt may be required to discontinue his or her studies.
